Second Edition San Marino, 4th to 6th of July 2011

In collaboration with the University of San Marino (Republic of San Marino)

The main aims of the EDA is to inform people, politicians, policy makers, trade and commercial unions and pressure groups in Europe about the necessity of supporting those who are dyslexic or DYS in a positive way, in order to avoid negative consequences caused by inappropriate education and training, low self-esteem and under-achievement which may lead to social exclusion.

Objectives of the EDA Community Summer School:

-to provide and to exchange information between stakeholders responsible to the people with Dyslexia about future strategies

-to raise questions, perspectives and answers for the creation of a Dyslexia-friendly Europe

-to formulate common strategies in a kind of policy guidelines-to raise public awareness about the situation of people with Dyslexia

The summer school is addressed to people interested in dyslexia, but preferably delegates of European dyslexia associations – EDA Members)

Admission is free, but travel and accommodation are at charge of the participants. The Department of Education of the University of San Marino will offer a free official diner for all participants and will organize some tourist visits.

Registration is requested before 31st of May 2011.

After one profound analysis and few short experts’ presentations providing some highlights of the theme of the day, the participants will be invited to propose their views and to share their ideas, experiences and suggestions in order to finalize a consent paper targeting the European level of the subject.
